Beware of bogus UK degree colleges

LONDON, Dec. 12:—Trading in bogus degrees became a criminal offence on November 30, writes John Clare, Education Editor, in the Daily Telegraph.

It will now be illegal for any British institution to award a degree unless it, or the award, appears on a comprehensive list published by Mr. Baker, Education Secretary.

Unauthorised institutions which offer degrees or awards using the terms bachelor, master or doctor, will be fined up to £2,000 for each offence.

The provisions, under the Education Reform Act, will be policed by Trading Standards Officers.

Mr. Baker said unscrupulous operators would now be prevented from undermining the reputation of British degrees.

He said the list of approved institutions and awards would give students, particularly those from overseas, the "means to distinguish between bogus UK degrees and the real thing".

Publication of the list was welcomed by the British Council which receives more than 5,000 inquiries a month from overseas students about degree study in Britain.

The following Universities and Institutions are authorised by Royal Charter or Act of Parliament to award UK degrees.
