Reach fruits of health care to rural people

The Minister for Health and Population Control, Maj Gen M Shamsul Huq, on Thursday said the diploma medical assistants could play an active role to reach the fruits of health care facilities to the rural people, reports BSS.

He was addressing the second national conference of Bangladesh Diploma Medical Association in Dhaka.

The Minister said to make the programme of 'health for all' the year by 2000 a success, the medical assistants could help the rural people to be conscious about health care so that they (people) could keep themselves free from diseases.

He expressed the hope that the medical assistants would build themselves as dedicated health workers imbued with the spirit of service to humanity to reach the fruits of health for all programme to every door steps. In this context, he mentioned about the national drug policy which had already yielded positive results and brought glory for the whole nation.

The Minister said that the
