Student politics and ragging

Rakib Hasan Roky, Founder and Director, Poor Redemption Foundation

Most of the students who are into politics tend to focus less on studies, and with political campaigns. In the process, they cause harm to many other fellow students. But how many of independent human beings securing bright future for themselves, remain

Many students are so invested in their political endeavours that they bare prime concern. Hence, I believe that student politics should be eliminated. Only then will the students be able to study with ease.

Another major obstacle to education is the ragging culture. The victims are has serious psychological and often physical consequences on many of the practiced across our educational institutions. Such disturbing acts must come to an end immediately so that students can focus on education and build a brighter future for themselves as well as the nation.
