RU admission process ends with 80 seats vacant

RU CORRESPONDENT

The admission process of first year honours of Rajshahi University (RU) ended with 80 seats in different departments still vacant, as the authorities did not announce next waiting list for new intake.

University academic section office admitted the fact yesterday.

The RU admission process for session 2006-07 began in January this year and admission date of first waiting list ended on March 11.

Three seats are vacant in the Islamic History and Culture, four in the History, three in English, one in Language, three in Computer Science and Technology, two in Population Science, two in Economics, two in Social Work and two in Public Administration departments, sources in the university academic section said.

The sources said as admission process of many public universities are yet to complete, many students who enrolled in RU may migrate to other universities vacating more seats.

Students in the next waiting list yesterday urged the authorities for filling up of the vacant seats and announce fresh admission date.

University student organisations and teachers also demanded for immediate filling of the vacant seats and give opportunity to the deprived students.

They also said the admission seekers had qualified in the merit list competing 80 students per seat, so these seats were important for higher education.
