Staff Correspondent  04 June, 2026, 01:30

State minister for primary and mass education on Wednesday said that all English medium schools will be brought under a single policy.

While visiting The Aga Khan Academy Dhaka, he also said that the initiative had been taken to ensure the quality of education and excellence in teaching, accountability as well as national interest.

The state minister also said that the government was working to build an integrated structure to ensure quality education for all students, said a press release issued by the ministry.

As part of achieving the aim, English medium schools in the country were being brought under a uniform policy, Bobby Hajjaj said.

‘We want to build an education system where students not only perform well in exams, but also learn to think, innovate and lead,’ he said, adding ‘as today’s students will lead the Bangladesh of tomorrow, one of our main goals is to develop them with world-class skills, values and creativity.’

The state minister further said that they wanted an education system where, regardless of whether a student studied in Bengali medium, English version, or English medium, everyone would have an equal opportunity to acquire national values, civic responsibility and international-standard skills.

During his visit, the state minister watched a student exhibition, their research activities, innovative projects and creative presentations.

He urged other educational institutions also to expand their activities in research, innovation and creative education.

According to the Bangladesh Education Statistics 2024, total 76,042 students enrolled and 7,178 teachers were teaching at 147 English medium schools in the country.
