London seeks teachers from Bangladesh

Inner London Education Authority, a London city education authority, is planning to appoint teachers from Bangladesh to meet the want of teachers in the British capital, according to BBC on Friday.

Teachers have already been employed there from EEC countries and also hired from Barbados.

BBC's education correspondent says the search is now beamed at Bangladesh to fill a number of vacancies of teachers in east London's Tower Hamlet area. More than 400 children in Tower Hamlet, most of them Bangladeshi origin, do not find room in schools partially due to want of teachers.

A British Home Department spokesman has said, the government was aware of the capital's teacher problem. Hence the entry permits for teachers to be appointed from Bangladesh would be considered during the decision.
