Some changes in DU admission rule

Dhaka University authorities have brought some changes in the admission quota which favours the wards of the university teachers and staff, reports UNB.

The General Admission Committee of the university took the decisions on August 25 in the face of movement by the Ganotantrik Chhatra Oikya (GCO), a conglomerate of eight-left leaning students organisations.

The decisions of the committee are: the wards who are interested to take admission to the university will have to appear the admission test and obtain at least 40 per cent marks, not more than two students will be allowed for admission to any department while some institutes and departments will be kept outside the admission quota.
