Sultana was available on the phone for comments.

Sultana said she just paid the money and knew nothing of how the certificate was obtained. Wishing anonymity, a an administrative staff of JU said several employees were involved in admitting students through shoddy means, and the nexus was thriving due to inaction by the authorities.

Sultana was asked to submit by Tuesday a copy of the Red Book listing freedom fighters and another of the gazette declaring his father a freedom fighter, but she could show none. Registrar Abu Bakr Siddque said an inquiry was launched.
