

'Education for all'

DAM observes Global Action Week

To advocate for EFA in general and for girls' education in particular 'Global Action Week' is being observed throughout the world from 6 April. Supported by UNESCO and other international organisations Belgium based global campaign for Education has organised the week as their advocacy initiative for the third time since Dakar conference in 2000.

Dhaka Ahsania Mission (DAM) has been observing the week by organising rallies, discussion meetings, seminars, debates, dramatic performances, cultural functions and similar other events throughout its working area spread in different parts of the country, says a Press release.

The World's Biggest Lesson was organised all over the world as an innovative and eye-catching advocacy event in support of girls' education held on Wednesday. The uniqueness of the event is this that the same lesson-plan was to be followed at all places and it was to start at 10 a.m. Bangladesh or Paris or New York time and to be continued for 30 minutes everywhere.

This historic event was included in this week's programme with a view to create a world record of participation of hundreds and thousands of people in a particular activity and there by to attract attention of all concerned for the cause of girl's and women's education.
