

Expectation from a professional teacher

Sir,

Teaching is a noble profession. It is a profession full of duties and responsibilities. A teacher must possess some qualities to guide the future generation of the nation. He must be well behaved and a perfect gentleman. He must be honest and a man of integrity to inculcate this virtue in young students who are going to guide the whole nation in the years to come. The more this generation will be morally developed the more the nation will be benefited. Any deviation from this phenomenon brings serious consequences for a nation which cannot be redressed easily.

A teacher must be a voracious reader to open various dimensions and horizons of knowledge and the same to be communicated to his/her students for the greater benefit of mankind. A follower of knowledge cannot commit crimes in a society. He/she searches for spiritual entity ignoring worldly power and self. The present dismal situation of our society reminds us whether we, the teachers community, have discharged our solemn duties sincerely. It is a very unfortunate situation for a nation when it fails to recruit the people endowed with precious human qualities for teaching the nation. The grim and bleak picture of our educational institutions throw us in the realm of doubt whether we could invite deserving persons to teach our young buds. Many teachers are seen to involve themselves in nasty politics just to gain their selfish ends forgetting that they are holding the magic wand of light to remove the darkness of ignorance. They forget that they should be above nepotism, favoritism, dishonesty and corruption.
