

JCD to pursue knowledge based politics: Laltu

Jatiyatabadi Chhatra Dal (JCD), in line with the directives from Prime Minister Begum Khaleda Zia, would go ahead with the demand for ensuring modern and international standard facilities for students in their respective institutions to enable them match the knowledge-based economic world, says BSS.

The newly appointed President of JCD, Shahab Uddin Laltu, while talking to BSS on Thursday said, "There is no alternative to quality education for facing the challenges of the present free market economy.

The JCD president said he is committed to restore the glory of student politics fortified with knowledge and practices.

New dimension highlighted by national causes, people's interest and above all welfare of the students, would determine the course of student politics in coming days, he said and observed, "otherwise, as a nation we would fall back in this age of Information Technology (IT) based world."

Terming the Dhaka University Central Student Union (DUCSU) as mini parliament, he said it should be philosophical baseline for promoting creativity, aesthetic sense, and cultural activities of the students.

Turning to JCD activities, Shahab Uddin said in order to discharge his duty smoothly he would work first for formation of all committees of the JCD within a short time.

He said, his organisation will take elaborate programme to attract the general students to JCD and solve problems of students after exchanging views with other organisations. He said the JCD would extend all cooperation to maintain a congenial atmosphere on the campuses all over the country.
